Du Maurier's Joke Pots. Du Maurier has been much written about in the press by men pretending to be his most intimate friends, though in one or two conspicuous instances the family of the late lamented were rather in New York where she is regularly en- surprised at this presumption. One of Du Maurier's institutions was a pair of vases which he called his "joke pots." He used to receive a large number of contributions from English and American friends, all purporting to be true and worthy of an illustration by him. I know at least several instances where friends of mine have sent him texts which he very soon afterward used to good advantage. As these contributions arrived he threw them into one of these "joke pots" by way of filling-a new kind of pigeonhole. Then when a moment arrived in which he had to scratch his head for a subject, he would dip his hand, or rather his arm, into this lottery and fish up one contribution after the other until he found one that might be regarded as a prize ticket.

In order that he might insure himself against repetition he observed the routine of never putting a contribution back into the same "joke pot" from which he had extracted it, but deposited it in been cleared. Then he attacked the second one and emptied all the lottery slips back into the first, and so on, duily weeding out the worthless ones and refreshing his memory as to those best adapted to his purpose. The fact that these two "joke pots" were kept so testimony to the personal charm widely exercised by this warm hearted master of black and white. - Harper's Weekly.

Pare potatoes with a sharp vegetable knife, just as thin as possible, for that part of the tuber lying close to the skin is richest in mineral salts, and put each potato as peeled into a pan of cold water to prevent discoloration. Have ready meanwhile a kettle of boiling water, and when the peeling process is complete take the potatoes from the cold water, and, covering them with boiling covered, to boil. Twenty minutes will usually suffice, but to test them use a pierced easily remove at once from the fire, pour off all the water and set them on the back of the range, uncovered, steam dry, assisting that process occa-sionally by a slight shaking of the ket-

If one asks the reason why potatoes should always be cooked in boiling water, try the following experiment for proof: Take two cups, in each of which has been put a teaspoonful of ordinary starch. Pour over one a quarter of a cupful of boiling water and over the other the same quantity of cold water and observe the result. The one over which the boiling water was poured stays in shape, a compact mass, while the one with the cold water dissolves into a soft paste. The potato is largely any one may draw his own conclusions. If you wish a pulpy, watery potato, use cold water; but if a dry, mealy, snowy ball that would delight the heart of Epicurus himself, always use boiling water.—New York Commercial.

Hakluyt's Zeal. The great work of Hakluyt is the Principal Navigations," in three folio volumes, a monument of useful labor. Nothing could stop or daunt him when there was a chance of obtaining new information. He rode 200 miles to have Master Hore's expedition to America in 1536. He saved numerous journals and narratives from destruction and the deeds they record from oblivion. His work gave a stimulus to colonial and to maritime enterprise, and it inspired our literature. Shakespeare owed much to Hakluyt's "Principal Navigations." Milton owed much more. As the years passed on Richard Hakluyt, in his own quaint language, continued "to wade still further and further in the sweet studie of the historie of cosmographie," and he achieved his great task, which was, in his own words, "to incorporate into one body the torn and scattered limbs of our ancient and late naviga-tions by sea." He declared geography and chronology to be the sun and moon, the right eye and the left of all his-tory.—Geographical Journal.

Jefferson's Boyhood Residence Jefferson spent part of his early boyhood at Tuckahoe, on the James river, a fine house still in existence about 14 miles west of Richmond, which has not parted with the traditions inseparable from an old Virginia mansion, including a bid slept in by General Washing-ton, a perambulating ghost who wrings his hands before cock crow and stables where a stud of thoroughbred horses consumed annually "1,000 barrels of orn." Near the flower garden, with its box edged walks, stands a little brick building styled the schoolhouse, wherein Studied together Thomas Jefferson and Thomas Mann Randolph, the boy heir of the estate, to which his guardian, Peter Jefferson, had removed with his family, the better to watch over his orphaned charge. This Thomas Mann Randolph married, first, Anne, daughter of Archibald Cary of Ampthill, the flery patriot of the Revolution, known by the sobriquet of "Old Iron." The oldest son of this marriage became Mr. Jefferson's son-in-law. Very late in life Colonel Bandolph solaced his widower-hood by taking to wife a beautiful young irl in her teens, Miss Gabriella Harvie f Richmond, an event that soon scatterd from her husband's home the children

One might go far without finding advice so kind, so temperate, in such exquisite sympathy with the difficulties of oor human nature in families of dielements, as that of the letter written by Mr. Jefferson to his daughter upon the subject of this marriage of her father-in-law in 1790. An odd outcome of the much discussed nuptials was that the new Mrs. Randolph, imperiously ig-noring the fact that her oldest stepson was already in possession of the name, pestowed upon her own son also his father's name of Thomas Mann Randolph From this high spirited and captivating Mrs. Gabriella Randolph descended the Misses Ella and Emily Chapman of Philadelphia, married respectively to the Marquis Louis de Podestad and Prince Pignatelli d'Aragon. - New York
